

SOME THINGS BOYS OF 16 SHOULD KNOW

Writer Takes Up Cudgels for Underprivileged Lad.

New York.—A writer some time ago took up the cudgels for the underprivileged boy, and after pleading that every juvenile be given a chance to acquire at least a reasonable education, gave a list of things a boy of sixteen years ought to know. Here are some of them:

How to write a fair business letter. How to write a social letter. How to spell all the words he knows how to use—that is, ordinary, everyday English.

How to care for a column of figures rapidly and accurately. How to make out an ordinary account. How to deduct 5 per cent, or 10 per cent, or 12 1/2 per cent, or 10 2/3 per cent from the face of it.

How to receipt it when paid. How to write an ordinary receipt. How to write an ordinary promissory note. Interest on Discount.

How to reckon the interest or discount on a note. How to draw an ordinary bank check. How to cash it at the bank and make a bank deposit.

How to make neat and correct entries in a check book or other simple record of business transactions. The chief cities and products of the main countries of the world.

The duties and powers of the chief public officers, and the manner of choosing them. The properties of the common plants, trees, minerals, and chemicals.

The daily application of the laws of physics, mechanics and chemistry. How to raise the common vegetables and flowers.

How to handle properly the saw, plane, and hammer. The basic laws of form and color, so as to know what harmony is.

How to read and sing simple music. Knowledge of Sports. How to swim and other such games of contest and teamwork, as football, baseball, hockey.

The history of his own country, and his great men and women. A number of good books, including the Bible.

Something of the great writers, speakers, inventors, discoverers and leaders of the world, other lands as well as his own.

How to care for his own body and to preserve a good personal appearance. How to meet all persons with reasonable courtesy, the weak and unfortunate with consideration, the strong and successful with dignity and women with honor.

The current events as recorded in the newspapers and public opinion as reflected not only in the journals but at public meetings.

Bit of Lace Trapped a Bonaparte to Wed

New York.—How an American woman, a tragedienne Bonaparte for a husband with a bit of lace, thus bringing the Napoleonic strain to America, is an almost forgotten legend resurrected in Baltimore by the woman's own daughter.

Jessie, Napoleon's youngest daughter, sought refuge in America from British pursuers on the high seas in 1803. Not without intention, it is believed, the rare old lady on the gown of Elizabeth Patterson became entangled on a button of his coat when she met a New York receptionist.

Just before his return to France, Napoleon was married with great pomp to Miss Patterson, the beautiful daughter of a Baltimore merchant.

The young wife, following her husband to France, was not allowed to land. She went to England, where their child was born. In the meantime Napoleon annulled the marriage, placed the former husband on the throne of Westphalia and forced him to marry a German princess.

The pope subsequently attested the validity of the marriage, but Elizabeth Patterson Bonaparte never saw her husband again.

ANCIENT SKELETONS FOUND ON THE OHIO

May Date From the Very Earliest Days.

Dillon Bottom, Ohio.—Remains of a few bodies, believed to be those of victims of an Indian massacre, unearthed here when excavation was being made on the shore of the Ohio river for towers to carry high tension wires from the Beech Bottom, W. Va., brought the attention of early settlers of the region south of Baltimore had a fort at that point. T. C. Galaher, seventy-two, said he recalled hearing from his grandparents that a number of settlers lost their lives while seeking shelter in the fort and says that in his youth the ruins of the foundations were visible. Most of the bones crumbled on being exposed to the air.

Most shells found about three feet above the bones gave rise to the theory that the graves had been decorated with shells.

Another theory is that the mounds may have marked the edge of the Ohio river. This would mean the bones date from the days of the mound builders who erected the mounds from which the city of Moundville, W. Va., situated within sight of the ancient burial ground, received its name.

There is no record of the river having flowed in the immediate vicinity of the spot during the last century. An Indian burial ground was unearthed years ago on a nearby hill top. Quarrymen, years ago, found skulls and skeletons of seven persons, and a few years ago a hillside a quarter of a mile away, was believed they had been entombed while seeking shelter beneath a ledge. Both adults and infants were in the group.

FISHERMEN'S MECCA DESTROYED BY FIRE

Home of Isaak Walton, English Landmark.

Washington.—Fishermen will be saddened to learn that Isaak Walton's thatched, half-timbered cottage at Shallowford, Staffordshire, has been destroyed by fire.

"England has lost one of her best beloved literary landmarks and fishermen the home of the art's most famous exponent, with the destruction of Walton's country home," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"As St. Andrews, Scotland, is the mecca for golfers and Stratford-upon-Avon the shrine of drama lovers, so Shallowford has been the place of pilgrimage for fishermen," continues the bulletin.

ROCKS NEWS
Most all the wheat around here has been threshed.

Mr. C. J. Paulett of near Eversgreen, visited Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Paulett in Lynchburg not long ago.

We are very sorry to hear of the deaths of Mrs. Minnie Cherrault of near Eversgreen, and Mrs. Minnie Bredlove and baby, of Eversgreen.

Many of the Rocks neighborhood people attended the association week before last.

Misses Virginia and Beatrice Ranson who have been visiting friends and relatives here, returned to their home in Norfolk last week.

Mr. J. K. Paulett, of Lynchburg, visited relatives here Sunday.

Mrs. D. W. Dinkins, Edward Ranson and Jesse Anderson spent a fine time at the "State Short Course" of the 4-H Club boys and girls last week at Blacksburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Paulett and children, visited relatives in Lynchburg recently.

Mr. Chap Harvey and Mr. Ed Harvey visited Mrs. Phil Paulett Sunday.

Samuel Ligon
It is with sorrow and regret that we record the tragic death of Samuel Ligon, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ligon.

The deceased whose death was caused by drowning was 23 years of age and at the time of his death was living in Shenandoah, New York, where he was holding a position of importance and responsibility. Samuel and other friends while out canoeing, the boat was turned by a whirlpool.

A friend, Clyde Edgington, of Knoxville, Tenn., vainly attempted to rescue him after a brief struggle both were drowned. We are grieved and oppressed by the home-going of these fine young men in youth.

Samuel at an early age gave his heart to God, and united with the Baptist Church, where he was always prompt and was Secretary of the Sunday School until he left for college. The deceased is survived by a large family connection, besides his parents he leaves five brothers and one sister.

We are at a loss to find words adequate to convey a sense of our deep love and admiration for his beautiful life. The funeral was at Baptist Church Tuesday morning where a large congregation gathered to pay their last tribute of love and respect. He was laid to rest at family burying place in a home of lovely flowers.

We deeply condole those who love him best and feel that there is a vacancy in our home church and community that cannot be filled, yet we hope of that blessed reunion in the "great beyond" where there is no parting nor tears.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the home of the deceased.

ANCIENT BURIAL CUSTOMS CITED

Excavations Near Wisconsin River Reveal Them.

Shelbogan, Wis.—Excavation of Indian mounds near Black River is under way at present, with archeologists from the Milwaukee Museum and the Wisconsin Archeological society in charge of the work.

Study of the bones already unearthed shows that the Indians buried there are of a tribe which did not use the "cradle board," or are of Indians who lived there before the method of carrying babies strapped to a board which was carried on the mother's back, came into general usage.

This last theory is most favored by the archeologists, for there are very few dishes and ornaments buried with the bodies, leading to the belief that the bodies took place before the custom of placing such articles in the graves became common.

One of the mounds already excavated has revealed the skeleton of a body buried in the side, while another has revealed a "pass" burial, where bones of others, previously dead, have been disinterred, banded together, and buried with the body of another person.

The latter, it is thought, may have been a child, but the head of a family died first, were buried and dug up again to be re-buried with the last of the group.

The mounds excavated so far are of an early type, being built in the shape of animals.

Police Take Kick Out of Limehouse Nights
London.—Amateur tourists who come to London with an idea of finding adventure in "wild and woolly" Limehouse are doomed to disappointment.

That picturesque section of the London dock district is no longer the place Hollywood motion pictures portray. The theatrical cafes, one of the last business establishments to sell Limehouse "atmosphere" to tourists, have pulled up their front door on Limehouse causeway and moved to Soho, where it can depend on a tourist clientele for its chop suey.

American reporters to their regret are those who are disgusted with Limehouse looking for excitement. Tourist boys with their neckties and muffers instead of collars and ties are the most picturesque things they have seen in the neighborhood.

Those who bicker for "the good old days" when crimes were frequent should blame it on Inspector Hall, who has just retired from the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard.

He is known as the man who cleaned up Limehouse. Ten years ago he took charge of the dock district. At that time Limehouse was infested with criminals. At every street corner and every alleyway there were men and women and white slave girls.

Lawyer Takes Client to Court in Airplane
St. Paul, Minn.—There are flying doctors, and the flying-press, but a lawyer somewhat of a novelty.

Second Lieutenant Thomas H. Walker, of the One Hundred Thirtieth Aero Squadron, had a case at Olivette and decided to fly to the city of the Twin Cities for insurance company.

He took off in an airplane at 10 minutes past 10. In another 10 minutes they were in the courtroom. Fifty minutes later the case had been tried, a verdict returned and the jury dismissed, and 70 minutes later they were back in the Twin Cities.

Western Washington Cow Establishes New Record
Tolt, Wash.—Again a cow from western Washington has established a world's record. Caroline, Walker Hazelwood having been officially credited with producing in a seven day test, 227 pounds of milk and 42.22 pounds of butter. This is the best production for the year-to-date in the world's record for butter production in a seven day test.

Teas Sees Air Fleet Using Wireless Power
New York.—Nathan Teas, inventor of the alternating system of power transmission, is in a terrible hurry to get his wireless power planes and airplanes without wheels, and is now driving through the air from central generating stations to wherever it is needed.

"I have already demonstrated experimentally that I can transmit all power by wireless half way around the earth without losing one-half of 1 per cent of it," he says.

He says that his system will be used for the transmission of power to the "great beyond" where there is no parting nor tears.
